To set up an Android Work Profile, go to Settings > Passwords and accounts. If you have a Work Profile, you will see a work tab with Work Profile settings listed underneath. You can securely use the same device for work and personal purposes—your organization manages your work apps and data while your personal apps, data, and usage remain private. ##ARTICLE managed Google Play Accounts enterprise is a set of users, devices, and administrator accounts used to manage apps for an organization's users. Organizations can have multiple enterprises, each with its own Enterprise ID and mapped to one EMM instance. Deleting or removing the association will result in users losing access to Google Play. Protecting the Admin account is essential. IT admins can use their admin account to log into play.google.com/work, view, and curate apps for managed users. Some EMMs provide a portal directly in their console where IT admins can view and curate apps. A managed Google Play Accounts enterprise has two levels of administrator: Admin and Owner. Next, create your first document in Google Docs or switch to Docs from another program. Multiple people can work on the same text document at the same time, with changes saved automatically. No special software is required for Google Docs. You may have multiple Google Accounts, such as a personal @gmail.com account and a @company.com account set up through your organization. Using an organizational account can provide additional features like scheduling conference rooms or accessing certain products that are disabled in personal accounts. One key difference between these accounts is the sign-in address; work addresses typically end with the company name rather than @gmail.com. Organizational administrators have control over which Google products you can use and how they function, so it's best to contact them for assistance or questions. You may be able to access features that are unavailable in your personal account, such as scheduling conference rooms from your Calendar.
